Message From The President

Office of the President

To the Class of 1975:

PROVIDENCE COLLEGE

PROVIDENCE, RHODE ISLAND 02918

Success in college can often be measured by the manner in which one meets the challenge of change. At Providence College this September, both challenge and change are in ample evidence. There is a new curriculum, the first class of coeds, a new college union building and even a new president. Each of these elements of change in our college life will present its own particular challenge.

The new curriculum will attempt to make learning much like life. It will try to show the integrity of the thought of western man, a wealth of wisdom which was generated from many moments of history, and was reflected in the best of his literature, his music and his art; and which was used sometimes to confuse, often to confound, but always to confront the religious, philosophical, political and social issues of each new day.

A curriculum can hardly justify being characterized as new however, were it to concern itself only with presenting the past—even the best of the past. The modern curriculum, if it is to be effective, must concern itself not only with the multiplicity of those things which are to be learned, but also, and equally important, with the interest and individuality of the learner. It is our hope that the new curriculum with its balance of humanistic, concentration and elective courses will achieve this objective.

The coming of the coed will also bring change and challenge to Providence College. A special task force has spent almost a year in planning for the adaptation necessary in order to make the first class of women students at Providence College feel genuinely welcome. There is no doubt, but that the presence of the Providence College women will do much to enhance both the academic and social atmosphere of our once all male campus.

The college union building to be opened this fall will, indeed, be an impressive structure and will provide a much needed focal point for student related activities. But I hope it will be more than that. I hope it will be a kind of symbol—a symbol that at the center of any genuine long term college success there must be a unity or union of those elements which make up today's institution of higher learning—the students, the faculty and the administration. This unity does not mean a false conformity in which everyone thinks and acts alike. It means, rather, an atmosphere of reason and of mutual respect in which there is honest candid communication among students, faculty members and administrators. Only from such efforts at communication can there come the imaginative and creative plan necessary for the future of Providence College.

I can assure you that the new president will make every effort to set an example in the area of communication. You will be my main interest. I must know your ideas. I will work hard at trying to be available for the many discussions that will be necessary.

In closing, let me say simply, welcome to Providence College, members of the very promising Class of 1975. May you find your greatest challenge in working with other students, faculty members, administrators—and, yes, even with the president—to change an era of confrontation into a memorable four years of mutual concern.

May God bless your efforts with every success.

Sincerely,

Thomas R. Peterson, O.P.

To the Class of 1975:

On behalf of the Student Congress I would like to take this opportunity to welcome you to Providence College. As you well know, the primary function of a college is to educate the members of the academic community. As a student your first obligation is to achieve well scholastically. However, college is much more than scholastic achievement, it must be a total experience. This experience can only be accomplished through student participation on all levels of campus life.

You come to Providence College at a time when colleges and universities are facing newer and more difficult problems. Providence College is no different. The cries for student rights and student power heard all over the country are being heard at Providence College. In addition, Providence College faces two newer problems—Coeducation and a new College President—although we sincerely hope that they do not prove to be problems.

During your next four years you will see things that will puzzle and frustrate you. Undoubtedly, you will want to change some of these things. Let me say this about the occurrence of change on campus. While the students must appreciate the point of view of the administration, there seems to be a reluctance on the part of the administration concerning change. Consequently, it is only through reason, unity, and perseverance that change will be affected.

Providence College can only be progressive if participation is at a maximum. Therefore, I would also invite you to become involved in the many student-oriented activities at Providence College. The most rewarding experience you will receive in your four years is having the opportunity to work with and for the students of Providence College.

If our activities interest you, if you have new ideas, or if you simply want to enjoy yourself through participation, I invite you to come to our office in the new College Union.

I hope you will soon feel that this is YOUR College.

Tom Turski
Acting Freshman Class President

MESSAGE FROM THE COUNSELING CENTER

There are many problems of a personal nature which may interfere with a student's ability to succeed in college. Counseling is provided for students who desire more effective utilization of their resources in meeting life's situations. Sensitivity training, in the form of human relations groups, is offered for developmental purposes.

We are a team of professional Clinical and Counseling Psychologists who are concerned with social, emotional, and educational problems as well as vocational and career planning activities.

In addition to offering psychological testing and interviewing, we maintain a reference library of graduate and professional school bulletins, and an occupational library relating to careers. The Center also functions as a clearing house to enable students to contact potential employees for career or terminal summer employment on and off campus.

Students are encouraged to drop in to our office in the College Union or call for an appointment.
