
PC Student Poll

Coeducation Questionnaire

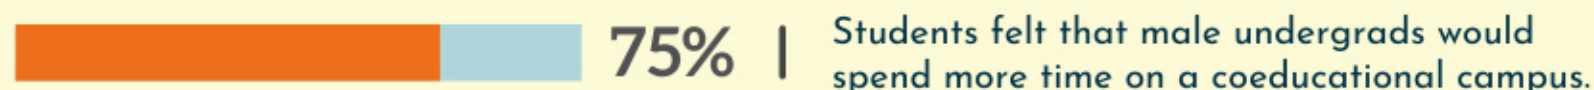

Of students felt that admitting women would have a positive impact on the College's recruitment of "well-qualified male students".

"Even now the all male atmosphere is hindering Providence College's ability to recruit and retain students and faculty members; moreover, the all-male atmosphere is stunting the development of an adequate cultural atmosphere... and of the students' necessary maturity."

- STUDENT CONGRESS REPORT
ON COEDUCATION

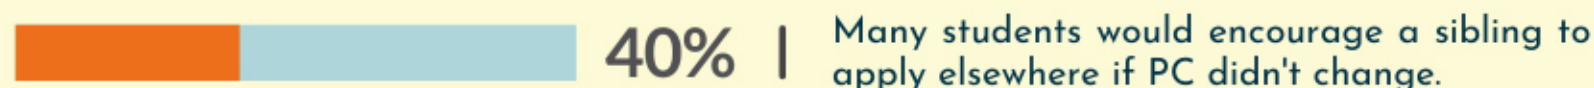

The student poll included questions on various aspects of campus life, from academic to social. From the results, it was clear what the student body wanted.

With many students leaving campus on weekends, they claimed that would change if the College enrolled men and women.

While the students polled believed class discussions would be improved, many felt women in classes would not impact their own academic performance, positively or negatively.

Students seemed to sense the changing times and felt their siblings and younger classmates would benefit from a more inclusive campus.

PC Students, at Least,
Like the Idea of Coeds